

The Strassler Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies at Clark University, Worcester, Massachusetts, U.S.A. seeks applications to its doctoral program. This year, opportunities are available only for those interested in studying aspects of the Holocaust and/or the Armenian Genocide. Applications from any country are welcome.

The Strassler Center is a forum for education and scholarship about the Holocaust, the Armenian Genocide, and other genocides around the world. Dedicated to teaching, research, and public service, the Center trains the genocide studies scholars of the future—the next cadre of professors, teachers, museum directors and curators, and non-governmental organization and government agency experts-about genocide and genocidal situations. Our faculty, serving as doctoral advisors, include Elizabeth Imber (Modern Jewish history), Thomas Kühne (Holocaust and European history), Ken MacLean (Asia and Transitional Justice), Elyse Semerdjian (Armenian Genocide and Middle East), and Frances Tanzer (Holocaust and Jewish history), and affiliated faculty from eight departments.

The deadline for applications to the program is 15 January 2027. Further application information and the required submission forms are online: <https://www.clarku.edu/centers/holocaust/doctoral-programs/>.

Doctoral students receive a full tuition subvention. During the first three years of the PhD program, they work as teaching assistants and are paid a salary as members of the graduate student union; in years four and five, they receive fellowship support in the form of an annual living stipend and research bursary. Questions about the doctoral program and the application process may be directed to Ken MacLean (kmaclean@clarku.edu), Interim Director of the Strassler Center, or Robyn Conroy (rconroy@clarku.edu), Associate Director, Strassler Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies, Clark University, 950 Main St, Worcester, MA 01610, U.S.A.
